D. Does HIPAA protect all health information?

No. You may have heard about the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA) Privacy and Security Rules. These are federal laws that set national standards for protecting the privacy and security of health information. Health information that is kept by health care providers, health plans, and organizations acting on their behalf is protected by these federal laws. However, you should know that there are many organizations that do not have to follow these laws.

Some examples of health information that is not covered by HIPAA include health information that patients:

- Store in a mobile app or on a mobile device, such as a smartphone or tablet.
- Share over social media websites or health-related online communities such as message boards.
- Store in a personal health record (PHR) that is not offered through a health provider or health plan covered by HIPAA.

E. Think carefully before sharing your health information online or via third-party apps.

Think carefully before you post anything on the Internet that you don't want to be made public—do not assume that an online forum or a third-party app is private or secure.

- Be aware that information posted on the web may remain there permanently.
- Research third-party mobile apps, software programs that perform one or more specific functions, before you download and install any of them. Be sure to use know app websites or trusted sources.
- Read the terms of service and privacy notice of the mobile app to verify that the app will perform only the functions you approve.
- Utilize non-profit resources like the CARIN Alliance to see if your consumer application abides by the CARIN Trust Framework and Code of Conduct.
